GENERAL NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Control over Vanderbilt's Money.

New York, Jan. 4.—A petition was filed [illegible] in the surrogate's court by Cornelius Vanderbilt, in which complaints were made [illegible] Wm. H. Vanderbilt and other ex-[illegible] of the Vanderbilt will. The petition [illegible] the court to issue a citation requiring [illegible] executors to show cause why they should [illegible] superseded, and that they may be en-[illegible] from further acting in the premises [illegible] the matter in controversy shall be dis-[illegible]. Hearing in the matter has been set [illegible] Monday next. The petition charges [illegible] things that Wm. H. Vanderbilt [illegible] in stocks on a gigantic scale [illegible] a greater extent than has ever been [illegible], and that to carry on such specula-[illegible] he has used and is using the assets of [illegible] to a very large extent as collateral [illegible] loans or otherwise, and has [illegible] and is now owing over the [illegible] of $18,000,000 for speculating pur-[illegible] that he has lost in such speculations [illegible] millions of dollars; that he is of ex-[illegible] and reckless temperament and is en-[illegible] to sustain the will by expending [illegible] and unnecessary sums of money to pro-[illegible] and intimidate witnesses, and has de-[illegible] Put to sustain the will he would spend [illegible] estate in litigation; that he is not [illegible] and reckless in his financial opera-[illegible] but is enlarging his railroad interests [illegible] more than the interests purchased [illegible], and is using the assets of such es-[illegible] for this purpose greatly to its hazard; [illegible] is contracting a large debt to corpora-[illegible] which he is president by withdraw-[illegible] his own benefit large sums of money [illegible] to which their creditors or stock-[illegible] are entitled; that such money is [illegible] by him and appropriated to his own [illegible] various controversies; that the aggre-[illegible] thus diverted is very large and is [illegible] invested and does not increase the [illegible] of the estate while subjecting him to [illegible] abilities which may be enforced against [illegible] time, and that his habits, associa-[illegible] associations and expenses are such as [illegible] a belief that the property he controls [illegible] rapidly be wasted.

Destructive Fire in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—At 3.30 this afternoon [illegible] discovered in the Hon ore block at the [illegible] Dearborn and Adams streets. This [illegible] was one of the finest in the city, [illegible] was first erected immediately preceding the [illegible] fire in 1871, and rebuilt soon after upon [illegible] same plan, in French renaissance style, [illegible] classical in its severity. It is 192 feet [illegible] Clarkson street and 150 on Adams, was [illegible] stories high with basement and mansard [illegible] faced with limestone and finished in [illegible] hard iron and stone. Foundation and walls [illegible] of unusual stability, the highest being 16 [illegible] in thickness. It was built for a hotel, [illegible] was remodeled for business purposes, [illegible] occupied by the postoffice shortly after [illegible] the fire of 1874. Its original cost was over [illegible],000, but it probably could be put up now [illegible] for. The floors were occupied as follows: [illegible] basement, by the postoffice; first and second [illegible] floors by the postoffice and by the Chicago & [illegible] Railroad Company; third floor, by [illegible] Sheridan and staff as army headquarters [illegible] the military division of the Missouri; [illegible] fourth floor, by the following lawyers: Law-[illegible] Campbell & Lawrence, Asham & Lin-[illegible] Baldwin & Ives; fifth floor, by the [illegible] Quartermaster of the army, by the heavy mail [illegible] contractors Bell & Whitfield. The fire was first [illegible] discovered moving in and lost [illegible] the library of four to five thousand [illegible] volumes in the upper rooms in the mansard [illegible] story occupied by the watchman and [illegible] his domiciles. The fire originated in the [illegible] cabinet shop in the basement while the [illegible] watchman was absent in the upper stories. [illegible] flames swept without warning up the [illegible] stairway to the roof and drove out the ten-[illegible] in the upper stories in an incredibly short [illegible] time. The rapidity with which the flames pro-[illegible] gressed after reaching the top of the building [illegible] cut off escape by the stairway of a number [illegible] of office employes, who were driven to [illegible] the roof, and for a time remained there in the [illegible] height of suspense and alarm, awaiting rescue. [illegible] One man, who leaned imploring out of a [illegible] window in the fifth story, was saved by the [illegible] efforts of a fireman, who ascended the fire [illegible] escape and bore her earthward in his arms. [illegible] The woman was saved not an instant too soon [illegible] for the fire, which was procured, and on [illegible] reaching it in turn descended to the ground. [illegible] Another woman was gotten out of danger in [illegible] the same way, and all valuable assets about the [illegible] building were locked up in the vaults. [illegible] The latter was taken to the new Singer [illegible] building on State and Washington streets, [illegible] where business will be transacted for the [illegible] present. The postal cars will do a large [illegible] share of the work which otherwise would fall [illegible] on the department. All mails left to night [illegible].

[illegible] Other persons arrested in Natchitoches [illegible] parish by U. S. marshal were brought [illegible] here. New Orleans News Items.

New Orleans, Jan. 4.—The yellow fever [illegible] is taking evidence and getting [illegible] daily and developing numerous [illegible] atrocities.

[illegible] Sherman and Gen. Hooker leave [illegible] this city to-morrow.

[illegible] Hancock departed for Washington [illegible] this morning as the recipient of a compli-[illegible] mentary dinner, yesterday, given by the [illegible] Democracy, at which were present all leaders [illegible] of the Louisiana Republicans, [illegible] Democrats had to harmonize [illegible] towards the public is in some respects consid-[illegible] ered open to much adverse criticism on the ground of illiberality, but, nevertheless, the present tariffs do not appear to be extortionate. The directors think the enactment of the funding act has a direct tendency to retard or prevent the adoption of a more liberal but a less immediately profitable policy by the company, the government having thus become one of the principal beneficiaries in the present system of management by existing a large proportion of the proceeds. They report that the consolidation of the Union Pacific with its connecting branch lines is not now desirable in the public interests, but they recommend that the companies be compelled to submit their differences on the subject of prorating to the decision of some impartial board of arbitrators. In conclusion, the directors endorse the recommendations of Secretary Schurz for legislation which shall enable the government to cede to the railroad company all odd sections of grazing or desert lands on one side of the road, and receive from it all similar sections on the other in order that each party may dispose of the lands in large tracts, in which alone they are desirable or susceptible of profitable use by purchasers.

Thurman and the Ohio Governorship.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Senator Thurman will not determine until to morrow whether he will attend the Democratic celebration at Columbus, Ohio, on the 8th inst. He will do so if the weather moderates so as to render traveling less disagreeable, and in such case will leave Washington to morrow night for that city. He will not discuss financial questions, but will give reasons why he does not desire his name to be used as a candidate for the governorship of Ohio. The senator is free and emphatic in the declaration that under no possible circumstances will he allow his name to be thus used.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Doctor Leonard Bacon, in a letter to the Christian Union, says that the collapse of the Old Catholic movement is already visible all over Europe, and will be complete in another year. The movement will be remembered as a schism split from the orthodox Catholic body. It was strongest in Germany. There its failure tends to the triumph of scepticism.

Domestic exports from New York, measured by quantities, have been one-third greater the past year than ever before. Their declared value the past year was nearly $80,000,000 greater than in 1874, notwithstanding the great fall in prices since then and the appreciation of gold.

The Robert E. Lee monument association has issued circular letters requesting that every county in the south be canvassed on the 19th of January, the anniversary of his birth, for contributions to enable the society to complete the monument. Eighteen thousand dollars are necessary, and [illegible] thousand dollars have been subscribed.

Chief Justice Waite has decided at the request of persons indicted for intimidation, violence and fraud at the recent elections in South Carolina. It is expected that the cases will be ready at the April term, and the president is desirous, for obvious reasons, that the highest judicial officer of the government should preside and decide the questions that will arise in the conduct of the cases.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The Democratic members will insist that Blaine appear before the outrage committee, and the Republicans will summon Thurman to show where intimidation existed in Massachusetts.

The house committee on claims have agreed to recommend an appropriation of $3,600, to be paid to A. B. Meacham, as some reparation for the serious injuries he received in the line of duty while acting under the directions of the government as one of the Modoc peace commissioners, at the same time that Gen. Canby and Dr. Thomas were massacred.

A number of national banks have applied to the treasury since the relations of the First National bank of New York with the department have become known, asking to be made government depositories. Such applications will in every case be granted, as the advantage to the government is increased with the increase of the number of responsible agents.

Colonel Mosby, just before starting to San Francisco, en route for his China consulate, remarked that he would return to Washington on the 4th of March, 1881, to be present at the inauguration of Gen. Grant as president for a third term.

Very Much to the Point.

Speaking of secret societies, the New North west presents this very solid nugget of fact which well deserves general attention.

Members wives and children are scrimped to furnish costly halls and costly furnishings which are selfishly enjoyed by men alone, their wives in hundreds of instances living upon bare floors and scrubbing them for years, while the money goes to help carpet with elegant Brussels, halls from which women are rigidly excluded, or are at best allowed to tread with hushed footsteps on special occasions. What a volume the records of lonely evenings passed by wives in cheaper quarters than their own and their children's dilapidated wardrobes, while their husbands, in cabalistic collars and curiously wrought aprons, enjoyed every luxury which modern furnishing could devise would make. If each woman, defrauded at once of her husband's company and the money which he spends on secret orders, would but furnish the record of a single evening of the hundreds thus spent in solitude, the aggregate would fill posthumous volumes that would freight the Great Eastern.

The Coming Debate.

[Washington Special, Dec. 29.]

Leading Republicans in the house propose to have something to say about the manner in which the recent elections in the south were carried and the failure of the southern people to respond to the president's southern policy. When the legislative appropriation bill comes up for discussion the Republicans have determined to press for liberal appropriations for the department of justice, in order to enable the attorney general to push the cases against parties who openly violate the federal election laws. The Democrats will undoubtedly oppose the appropriation The Republicans then intend to inaugurate political discussion, which will afford an opportunity to more fully expose the workings of a policy by which an almost solid south was created. It is the opinion of some of the most prominent Republicans in the house that if Senator Blaine had not moved his coming investigation in the senate, but remained quiet and allowed the Republicans in the house to make issue with the Democrats over liberal appropriations for the department of justice, the Republican party would make more capital than is possible now.

Rare Musical Genius.

[Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.]

Professor Malone, the brass and string bandit, was interviewed this morning by a man who wanted a situation in the band. "What can you play?" asked the professor. "Well, I aint much for fiddlin', but if you want wind stuffed into a cornet, or wind belted out of a bass drum, I'm your oyster?" He was engaged.

A great deal of time was devoted to the case of Alex. Austin, ex-tax collector, in connection with charges preferred against City and County Attorney Burnett, District Attorney Murphy and Auditor Maynard. The two latter are exonerated of any improper dealings in connection with Austin, but Burnett is censured for having placed himself in a very embarrassing situation, in which no public official should allow himself to be placed, by borrowing money from Austin when But[illegible] was [illegible] that in a number of instances the jury [illegible] indicted let public officials about [illegible] cal difficulties have prevented. In connection with the expose of swindling sewer contracts by the Bulletin, the grand jury have found a number of indictments which are at present withheld. It is understood, however, that among those are John Hogan, contractor; ex-Street Superintendent John Noonan, contractor, and E. W. Casey, sewer inspector, recently discharged.

Porphyry Dams the Silver Stream.

[Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.]

Not a few enthusiastic persons about this city are now industriously engaged in damning porphyry. But for porphyry some of them would have been en route for Paris, Berlin, London, Rome and Hongkong—yes, Hongkong; for porphyry has knocked the wind out of the sails of not a few Celestials. The Chinese would like to go, but can't. They too, damn "porphy." Ladies who had already feasted their eyes upon sets of diamonds which they were to sport as soon as the "crosscut" was well under way in the rich ore of the 2,200 foot level of the Sierra Nevada, damn porphyry—in their hearts. Young [illegible] and maidens who had already selected sites on which to erect "such lovely cottages," and whose wedding days were marked in the almanac, now walk forth in the moonlight and single blessedness and—even as their lips meet in kisses—mutually damn porphyry. It is not the "iron" but porphyry that has "entered our souls." "Marble hearts?" no, our hearts are porphyritic. In days of old people occasionally went into sackcloth and ashes, which was pretty rough, but was nothing to getting into porphyry. Somehow, when porphyry makes its appearance "all our hopes are ore." Porphyry has even saddened the hearts of the little folks. They must do without the many pretty things they were promised, and all on account of the porphyry. They are beginning to have a bad opinion of porphyry. A little miss yesterday asked: "Ma, who made porphyry?" "God, my child," said the truthful parent. "I thought it was the other one—the naughty one," said the youngster. "God also made the beautiful silver and put it in the veins," said the pious mamma. "Yes, but in most places he spread it very thin," grumbled papa, whose broker had just sold him out.

Presidential Candidates.

[From the Washington Post, Dem.]

The contest for the Republican presidential nomination, two years hence, seems to have already practically narrowed itself down to Grant, Blaine and Washburne. The two former stand as the principal active competitors, and the latter is the most distinguished representative of the grand army of compromise candidates. Grant's strength lies in the south, Blaine's in the northeast, and Washburne's, in a less positive way, everywhere. Then after analyzing the strength of each, it says: "Grant, however, is almost invincible from the fact that the tremendous influence of the money power is all on his side. This influence really brought about the nomination of Hayes in 1876. The power that is to present it from accomplishing the same in 1880—with the name of Grant substituted for that of Hayes—has yet to assert itself. Such are the probabilities and possibilities bearing upon the case. The nomination of Grant in 1880 seems, therefore, from present indications, to be inevitable.

GRANT IN IRELAND.

The Ex President Accorded the Honors of Dublin.

A Hearty Irish Welcome—Grant's Cordial Response.

Snubbed by the Cork Town Council.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Grant's Reception at Dublin.

Dublin, Jan. 4.—Ex-President Grant, on arriving at the City Hall, was cheered by the large crowd which had assembled. The mayor, in presenting the freedom of the city, referred to the cordiality always existing between America and Ireland, and hoped in America Gen. Grant would do everything he could to help a people who sympathize with every American movement. The freedom of the city was enclosed in an ancient carved bog oak casket. Gen. Grant replied that no ceremony had given him such satisfaction as the present one. He was proud to belong to country containing many Irishmen. He said he was not an eloquent speaker, and that he could only thank them for the honor done him. Three cheers were given for General Grant and three more for America. Dr. Butt made a speech highly complimentary to Gen. Grant.

Dublin, Jan. 4.—Two hundred guests were present at a banquet given in honor of Gen. Grant this evening. The Lord Mayor presided, and Gen. Noyes returned thanks for the toasts to President Hayes' health. Gen. Grant, replying to a toast to his health, commented upon the cordiality of the popular reception accorded him. He believed and hoped that the trade depression in America would soon be over. He said that Americans strove to be honest and to pay their way, and as they became prosperous so also would England. His speech was much cheered.

New York, Jan. 5.—The Herald's cable dispatch says that Grant, in Dublin, visited the Royal Irish Academy, Trinity College, and other places of interest. The Herald's reporter continues: Owing to the lateness of the hour last night, I did only scanty justice to the speech of General Grant at the banquet given him at the Mansion House. The company rose and gave an Irish welcome when the general's name was proposed. The ex-president made in response the longest speech of his life, speaking in a clear voice, and being listened to with rapt attention. He referred to himself as a fellow citizen of Dublin, and intimated amid much laughter and cheering, that he might return to Dublin one day and run against Barrington for mayor and Butt for parliament. He warned those gentlemen that he was generally a troublesome candidate. Then passing to serious matters, the general said: "We have heard some words spoken about our country—my country, before I was naturalized in another. [Laughter.] We have a very great country, a prosperous country, with room for a great many people. We have been suffering for some years from very great oppression. The world has felt it. [Hear, hear.] There is no question about the fact that when you have forty-five millions of consumers, rich as we are, and when they are made to feel it [Applause.] You have had great prosperity because of our great extravagance and our great [illegible], who could [illegible] my friend [Noyes] who spoke so eloquently to you a few moments ago, lost a leg in it. You did not observe that, perhaps, as he has a wooden one in the place of it. When that great conflict was going on, we were spending one thousand million dollars a year more than we were producing, and Europe got every dollar of it. It made for you a false prosperity. You were getting our bonds and our promises to pay. You were cashing them yourselves. That made great prosperity. But we finally got through that great conflict and with an inflated currency which was far below specie, our people were more extravagant. Our speculations were going on and we continued to spend three or four hundred millions of money per year more than we were producing. We paid it back to you for your labor and manufactures, and it made you apparently and really prosperous. We, on the other hand, were getting really poor, but being honest, however, we came to the day of solid honest payment; we came down to the necessity of selling more than we bought. Now we have turned the corner. We have had our days of depression; yours is just coming on. I hope it is nearly over. [Hear, hear.] Our prosperity is commencing, and as we become prosperous you will too, [applause.] because we become increased consumers of your products as well as our own. I think it safe to say that the United States with a few years more such prosperity, will consume as much more as they did. Two distinguished men have alluded to this subject. One is the president of the United States. He said that the prosperity of the United States would be felt to the bounds of the civilized world. [Applause.] The other is Lord Beaconsfield, a most far seeing man, one who seems to me to see as far into the future as any other man I know, [applause] and he says the same as President Hayes.

A Marked Slight.

Cork, Jan. 4.—The corporation of this city has received intimation of an approaching visit from Gen. Grant. A strong feeling is manifested against giving him a public reception because of his supposed hostility to Catholicism.

Cork, Jan. 5.—At a meeting of the town council yesterday, after several bitter speeches by Catholic members, a motion that the letter of the U. S. consul at Queenstown announcing Gen. Grant's coming, be simply marked "read," was carried without a dissenting vote. A previous motion to give General Grant a proper reception was ignored.

HENCE THESE PLAINTS

With all that portion of the Democratic press which places partisanship before the public interests there is a concerted effort to create an impression that the report of the committee of investigation is unfair to the state officials of the state It may be that not quite all the Democratic journals of the state will try to apologize for the frauds which have been exposed, but as yet we have seen no one of them which has uttered a word in condemnation of the frauds or their perpetrators All those which have as yet commented on the report censure the committee instead of the unfaithful and derelict officials They are of opinion that the Grover Chadwick administration really did nothing wrong or at most that its faults were very trifling that the investigation has been conducted more for the purpose of breaking down certain persons than with the object of getting at the truth that the committee allowed personal feeling and prejudices to creep in and tinge their report with a color of revenge and spite, that the object has been more to 'gratify personal hatred" than to benefit the people, and so on, It may be remembered that this was precisely the vein of comment pursued by the Tweed organs when the great rascalities perpetrated by his ring were first exposed Yet it was not long till these apologies for fraud were drowned in the general voice of indignation and astute Democratic leaders saw that their only hope was to denounce the frauds and join in the general demand for the punishment of the criminals Now here in Oregon is a case which in all its parts shows as much dishonesty as that of the Tweed ring, and in proportion to the wealth of our state, the amount of the frauds and robberies is far more than that perpetrated by the Tweed gang, the enormity and infamy of whose operations resounded throughout the whole country If the Democratic organs and politicians shall now pledge their party to the defense of the great frauds of the last eight years in this state, as many of them seem to be preparing to do, in the very next election their party will be annihilated Its only hope is in repudiating utterly the Grover-Chadwick gang and all their works and calling to the leadership another class of men Suppose this report were a revelation of the frauds of Republican administration how would these organs which are now excusing Democratic delinquents ring with denunciations of Republican rascality, going even so far as to assert that the disclosures furnished further proof that the Republican party was inherently corrupt, had no honesty within it, and could nowhere be trusted. But they allow themselves to see no fault whatever in their own party, and they who can find nothing to censure in Grover's transactions in the school fund, in Chadwick's operations in swamp lands, in Brown's method of getting forty dollars out of the state for every ream of printing paper used, and in the miscellaneous transactions in which Cann, Gilfry, Hackleman, Brooks, Barker, Miller and others participated, are invincible to proof when their fellow partisans are arraigned as culprits.

But there are many Democrats with whom [illegible] and they know that it has no tinge of personal malice in it. Who are the authors of the report? There is but one Republican among them, and this fact is a sufficient answer to the charge that the committee was moved by partisan considerations in reporting he delinquencies of Democratic officials The legislature which appointed this committee is Democratic in both branches A majority of the committee are Democrats of unexceptionable standing in their party Mr Galloway of Yamhill is a man in whose integrity his people have so much confidence that he has been twice elected to the legislature from a Republican county. Mr. Thompson, of Wasco, is a man of highest standing for intelligence and honor and a Democrat whose record even in a party sense has never been impeached Mr White of Umatilla, though formerly a Republican, has acted consistently with the Democratic party for many years past, and was elected to the legislature by the highest majority given to any candidate in the strongest Democratic county of the state Mr. Ross, of Jackson, though now acting as an Independent, has a Democratic record of many years' standing, and never was a Republican The only Republican on the committee is Mr. Thompson, of Multnomah, and he has never been an extreme partisan The members of the committee are men whose lives disprove the assertion that they have been or could be actuated by "personal spite" in any matter, and least of all in a matter of responsible official duty. The attempt to parry in this way will not do. The committee found official misconduct and reported upon it, and their language, though always plain and direct as it should be, is always temperate and discriminating. It faithfully reports the facts which the committee found The language is used to express, not to conceal their meaning

The organs allege injustice, but in no instance do they point it out. What would they have had of the committee? Should it have whitewashed Grover and reported that his "loans" of the school fund directly to himself or in a circuitous way through others so that the money came back to his pocket—transactions through which the fund has lost vast sums which it will never recover—were quite proper? Ought they to have found that the Chadwick Cann Walker business was worthily done? That the unusual and enormous allowances to sheriffs were quite right? That the payments to Gilfry Miller, Barker and a multitude more pay ments which were not only scandalously extravagant in themselves but were wholly without authority of law, were proofs of official fidelity? That the forty thousand dollars out of which the state was swindled in connection with the Modoc war, including the large amount of property which never has been accounted for and overpay of officers for services never rendered ought to be overlooked? These are but a few instances Like questions might be asked in relation to all the delinquencies which the report has brough to light. The committee found that robberies had been committed in every direction, and what was it to say? We are told that it has shown 'prejudice and exhibited spite in speaking of these things and yet it has spoken of them only in the terms of the dictionary and the statute What the partisan organs would have is the same non-committal circumlocution in the report which may be seen in the testimony of Chadwick and others before the committee in other words a report designedly drawn to mean nothing and to cover every illegal and wrongful transaction They have not been accommodated these plaints. Had the committee Hea[illegible] whitewashed everything and refused to tell the people how they have been plundered the organs would loudly applaud The Democratic committee can well afford to appeal from the judgment of those organs of their party which condemn them debased as those organs are by the system of official and partisan venality and corruption which the report has exposed to the honest sentiment of their own party and of all parties which will sustain them and crush all the perpetrators of official fraud as well as their apologists and abetters

FINISH THE ROAD

It is really a reproach to the state that it has not long ago constructed a good road along the Columbia river, so furnish means of communication between the eastern and western divisions of the country at times like the present When navigation is closed With out such road both sections are effectually bottled up Years ago this was of less importance to Western Oregon, but the growth of the eastern division has been so rapid and its development has become so great that we can no longer afford to be cut off from it Besides, it is due to the people there that such connection be established A road has been finished from the Dalles to the lower Cascades, and there is a good road from Portland to a point some distance beyond the crossing of Sandy But for the space of seventeen miles there is no road Part of the way the route is a somewhat rugged one, but the road would not be expensive and considering its importance and value the state ought to finish it In fact it ought to have done so a good while ago and it is hoped that another legislative session will not be suffered to pass without the necessary action If a few thousand dollars of the money which has been grabbed unlawfully by officials had been spared for this needed service the two divisions of our state would not become strangers to each other every winter when a freeze occurs

Small change now, says the Standard that we shall get the general government to assume payment of our Modoc war claims The intimation is that the legislative committee should not have exposed the frauds But such portion of these claims as are fraudulent the government ought no to pay! and if they are fastened on the state it is the penalty it must suffer for having officials who did not protect its honor and its interests

Not the slighest disturbance has been produced in financial circles anywhere by resumption of specie payments Government redeems all its notes as fast as offered but is not finally withdrawing any portion of them"

LITERARY NOTES

The Atlantic for January has a strong but anonymous article on "Workingmen's Woes" Its most important article on the whole, is, however, Goldwin Smith's inquiry, "Is Universal Suffrage a Failure?" a summary of which has been printed by THE OREGONIAN

A new serial by Petroleum [illegible] will be something of a relief [illegible] Paper City" records sand cities in the west [illegible] to become Chicagos and did not. It is refreshing to get at Nasby a humor without the orthography. The author has had the assistance in many of the chapters of this book of Shirley Dare, the well known writer for the magazines

London Athenæum The narrative of the new "Wanderings of Ulysses," to which citizens of the United States look forward, will be less comprehensive than was expected, as Gen Grant has given up his plan of traveling round the world and returning home by way of San Francisco Mr. Russell Young, who has generally accompanied him, will be intrusted with the arrangement of any particulars which Gen Grant may desire to publish, and Mr Young's own contributions to the New York Herald will supply material for a volume.

A correspondent writes 'Why did it require sixteen years to complete Mrs Clarke's 'Concordance to Shakespeare? Was it the manual labor involved? There is no 'head work' required, it seems to me What is the use of such a book when completed? Mrs Clarke did not devote sixteen years of close continuous labor to her Concordance She was sixteen years in compiling it because it is an immense work, requiring not only great industry, but good judgment and taste Its use is, first, to index Shakespeare, so that any part of his writings can be instantly referred to, secondly to afford materials for a comparison of his plays, and thirdly, to assist in an analysis of his vocabulary

Dr Weisse in his book, heretofore noticed says the chief obstacle to the diffusion of the English language is arbitrary orthography This is chiefly due to the confusion caused in Anglo Saxon by the introduction of provincialisms Nearly all the words not spelled as they are pronounced are of Anglo-Saxon origin and it is a remarkable fact that in the early Saxon the spelling and pronunciation of these words are harmonious Dr Weisse in this connection, gives a table of fifty Anglo Saxon words representing by 179 letters each averaging three letters all of which are pronounced, whereas the fifty corresponding English words are represented by 23 letters each averaging four letters, of which at least one is unpronounced Thus the mother dialect is more phonetic and concise than the daughter 'As these superfluous letters crept into English through provincialisms' says the author, "to drop them and return to pure Anglo Saxon under Alfred the Great would phonetize about one quarter of the English language and render it more laconic two decided advantages which ought to enlist Anglo Saxonists in this movement especially when they consider that the English vocabulary numbers about three-quarters of Greco Latin words, which need less phonetizing than the Anglo Saxon quarter

Senator Bayard

"A Delawarian' sends us the following

I observe that in reply to a question from a correspondent as to the pronunciation of Senator Bayard's name, you say that the second a is silent That is a mistake which I may venture to correct as I have been familiar with the name all my life It is always pronounced Bi and (as in pine and two syllables with the accent on the first) by those who are so fortunate as to bear it

The error noted was the result of inadvertence on the part either of editor or compositor The statement was first in the second name (Bayard) the second a is silent The intention was to say that 'the first a is silent It is probable that the error arose from inattention through repetition of the word second The purpose was to say that the name is pronounced as if written By-ard—giving by the sound of long i as in the explanation above

A Christian Inference

[New Orleans Picayune Paris Letter.]

M Alex Dumas was returning home late t other night when an old woman half concealed by the deep recess suddenly rose from the seat where she was crouching and craved alms Dumas crossed her palm with silver The friend with whom he was walking asked 'Do you give to such people' Aren't you often deceived? There are so many impostors in Paris? Dumas answered My dear fellow when an old woman begs one may give without fear of being imposed on for there is prima facie evidence that she has the misfortune to have no son"

CITY.

SHIPPING.—There are now sixteen "ocean ships" in our harbor. One of the fleet, the Fairshire, Capt. Neven, hauled over to East Portland wharf to take in 200 tons of fir recently procured charter for Europe. The City of York, Capt. Auld, who has been one year ago with a cargo of wheat to Europe in this vessel, expects to be ready for sea over to-day to take in his first batch of wheat for Europe; the Oberd Bay is loading at Ainsworth's wharf, foot of Morrison street, the Oberd Bay is loading at Lewis' wharf; the Wildwood, a fine Norwegian bark, has been ready to go down the river for nearly a week; the Wildwood and the Annie M, three magnificent American wooden ships, are all present without clearance. The two latter have been in this port for about six weeks, and the former over two months, waiting for freight. No steamers have gone up the Willamette for several days. If the temperature continues as mild as it was yesterday we believe travel will be resumed in a day or two on the lower river.

THEY WILL PERSIST.—For several days past several even men have been engaging in the new hazardous sport of skating on the river above the city. It is true the river is frozen, but it is very doubtful about the ice being sufficiently strong to bear a skater, with safety. Yesterday we observed quite a crowd of boys along near the shore in the upper part side of the city. Thus far no accidents have occurred, but we shall keep near at hand a number of sharp pencils and hold them in momentary readiness to engage in obituary business. It is not at all improbable that before the skating season shall close some persons will go down to their graves. Not a very pleasant reflection to lie under at the bottom of the river and have weeds and clammy corse pulled out early in spring. However we are not foolish enough to suppose for one moment that this item will be heeded.

DIFFERENCES BY THE ICE.—The interruption to travel and business occasioned by the ice in the lower rivers are numerous and, in some cases quite serious. Especially serious is the annoying to three gentlemen in our harbor vessels are lying at Astoria, two of them ready for sea, viz., the Wastwater, Capt. W. Cowman, and the Robert Lee, Capt. Capt. J. Black, of the ship Shenir, lying at Astoria who came up the night the river closed to forward by barge a cargo consisting 350 tons of her cargo of wheat, having sick and confined to his bed, at the seaside boarding house of Mr. Farmer, Harrison, between Third and Fourth sts. He took a severe cold and is threatened with a course of fever.

PERMIT.—Mr. J. R. Farrish obtained permission from Col. Gillespie to have lithographs of the chart of the Columbia river bar, improvements made this year, and to make it available for handling, had Capt. Jessen, pilot for the O. S. S. Co., who made the former survey of the bar for government, review the same. A proof of the chart was received here, approved by Col. Gillespie and with his approval, the board of trade has ordered 1,000 copies, intending to send them abroad. Col. Farrish has received a telegram that the charts were on the steamer Oregon, and the charts will reach foreign ports in time for vessels coming here for next harvest.

BUSINESS.—Some enterprising parties, who have coffee and sandwiches to sell, cleaned the ice from skating courses on Giles' Lake on Monday morning, and during the afternoon and evening following, and almost all day Sunday, that pretty lake was the scene of gay and joyous sport. Scores of hacks and express wagons, running constantly from this city and the skating ground, made rapid and easy passage. The change in the weather which has occurred will, probably, thaw the ice by to-day, and all sporting people may lay their skates on an shelf until next winter.

HIGH UP.—The river yesterday morning in Stark street presented an unbroken sheet of ice and afforded plenty of sport to youngsters who crossed and recrossed on skates at will, causing spectators on the bank to shudder at the thought of breaking through. One man, evidently not crossed from the foot of Morrison and upon nearing the other side broke through, knocking all the courage out of him and making discretion the better part of valor, came back on the boat considerably the worse for his trip.

BOUND FOR THE DALLES.—Mr. Henry Wilson has been employed by the postal department to carry the mail to and fro between Portland and The Dalles during present freeze up. Capt. Foster started on horseback Saturday afternoon with the letter mail for The Dalles. He expects to reach his destination Monday evening unless unusual difficulties are encountered. This morning Mr. Wilson will start for The Dalles with the mail. A mail from that place is expected to reach here about next Tuesday.

THE RIVER AT VANCOUVER—NARROW ESCAPE.—The following special dispatch to THE OREGONIAN from Vancouver, was received last evening: The Columbia closed this morning and the ice is now solid. The mail carriers, Mr. Troupe and Frank Goodhue, were caught in the slush ice yesterday afternoon, and being out all night, reaching shore this morning after a perilous passage and many narrow escapes from drowning. Goodhue's feet were frosted. The ice blockade leaves the river at a standstill.

WAITING FOR SAFETY.—The O. S. N. and W. T. Companies have caused a large number of their steamers to be moored at the foot of Sauvie's Island, so as to be protected against ice when the river opens. The first division of the following crafts: Columbia, Gov. Moody, Welcome, Alice, Ocklahama, Bonanza, and two: Autocrat, Fannie Patton, Occident. Division three: Columbia, Chief, Wasco, E. N. Cooke, Willamette Chief.

APPOINTMENT OF A. H. BALL.—A. H. Ball, of the firm of Ball & Platt, contractors on the U. S. locks and locks at the Cascades, Oregon, died suddenly at that place yesterday. His wife resides with him. Her afflictions are made more severe by the river being closed by ice and communication with friends almost impossible. Her brother, Claude Smith, is at Olympia but cannot reach her for two or three days.

HAS BEEN PURCHASED.—The Monumental Mining Company has purchased Senator Jones' mill at Carson, in the Blue mountains, and will move it to the vicinity of the mine. The mill is to be used in the manufacture of lumber for the construction of the company's flume, to be erected next spring. The mill is to be moved the distance of two miles by rail.

POLICE CALENDAR.—During the month of December the police have made 164 arrests, classified as follows: Drunk and disorderly, 57; disorderly, 20; assault and battery, 8; violation of ordinance, 5; gambling, 4; conceal weapons, 2; perjury, 1; fugitives from justice, 1; keeping opium houses, 3; defacing property, 1; contempt of court, 1.

DEATH.—Mr. P. T. Smith, a dairyman, who owns a ranch about two miles from St. Helens on the Columbia slough, had the misfortune to lose his milk house last Friday afternoon by fire. The building and all the contents were entirely destroyed. The fire was discovered about 3 o'clock. Origin unknown. Loss about $500.

FOR VANCOUVER.—Saturday morning a party of Vancouverites left Portland and returned for Vancouver by land. A dispatch from Mr. George H. Bonny, who was one of the party, Saturday evening, stated that the trip was accomplished after four days hard labor. Mr. Bonny says that they "had a good time coming."

WORK COMPLETED.—Mr. H. T. Hudson has completed the seal of the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Washington territory. In design and workmanship the seal is quite handsome.

THE S. T. CHURCH.—The unfortunate and still fortunate craft S. T. Church, which was sunk some days ago at Gervais slough, is all right again. She has been floated off, brought down to Oregon City and is at present in the dry dock there. The damage can easily be repaired and the steamer will soon be ready for service.

FROM ASTORIA.—Messrs. Trenchard & Upshur telegraphed from Astoria Saturday forenoon at 9 o'clock as follows: Wind strong, northeast, bar smooth weather clear and cold. At 11 A. M., the barkentine Welcome is coming in over the bar, will arrive at Knappton at 11:15 A. M., freezing.

P. L. B. ELECTION.—At the annual meeting of the Portland Light Battery, held yesterday, the following officers were chosen: Captain, Thomas Mountain, secretary, L. B. Barry, first sergeant, J. C. Lines, second sergeant, Thomas Adams, third sergeant, J. Kay; armorer, H. Parker.

FROM THE DALLES.—Judge W. Lair Hill and John C. Cartwright, of the Dalles, arrived in this city Saturday evening from that city. They came all the way on horseback. These gentlemen left the Dalles about 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. They report the road in very good condition for travel.

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT.—Judge Deady will decide in this court this morning in the case of U. S. vs Quivey.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATER.—At matinee Saturday afternoon "The Duke's Motto" was repeated for the last time to a large audience. In the evening Mr. Piercy appeared in one of his strongest impersonations—"Bob Brierly" in the "Ticket-of Leave Man." The attendance was very fair, and the play very satisfactorily presented. Mr Piercy appeared very advantageously, and the character of the ex convict must be accorded a place among that gentleman's strongest and most effective portrayals. The support was very excellent. Miss Walters made a very acceptable "May Edwards;" Miss Woodthorpe, as "Sam Willoughby," was very clever; J. M. Ward as "Mother Moss," was unusually excellent, both as to acting and make up; Mr. Lindsay, as "Hawkshaw," the detective, was capital. Walter Leman made an excellent "Mr. Gibson;" Miss Wade as "Mrs. Willoughby," gave a very laughable impersonation of that loquacious but generous-hearted woman; Mr. Wade, as "Jim Dalton," was quite effective.

"TWO ORPHANS."—This evening Sardou's beautiful play of 'Two Orphans" will be produced at New Market theater in magnificent style. Mr. Sam Piercy will personate the dual roles of "Pierre" the cripple, and "Chevalier de Vawdrey." These characters have been played by Mr Piercy for over 300 nights in the eastern cities. Miss Walters will personate the character of "Madame Frochard" and be supported by the full company. Porter has painted some new and magnificent scenery incidental to the play. No effort has been spared to place this beautiful piece on the stage in first-class style. Every lover of the drama should not fail to witness the "Two Orphans." Reserve your seats in time.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The School Not for Children Only—How to Secure the Results of Teaching.

BY REV. A. L. LINDSLEY, D. D.

This subject is second to none which has been presented here, for surely all our preparations and efforts, yea, even our prayers, may go for nothing unless we gather in the harvest.

We have a definite aim. No Christian enterprise has so unique, none so complete as Sabbath school instruction. It takes up a limited part of the career of an immortal spirit, and gives it direction towards a happy eternity.

It begins with childhood and ends, alas! too often, but nevertheless for the most part, with youth. It should not stop here for no good reason can be assigned for excluding persons of any age from class study of God's word as conducted in church services. Since, however, the great majority of pupils belong to early life, the domain of our church is well defined and we can therefore with great clearness survey its boundaries at a single glance. None can leave them without our notice, and yet how many, in some cases embracing a great majority do escape, go away into the world, and so far as the Sabbath school work is concerned, they are actually lost.

This is a dreadful result. How can we prevent it?

On the presumption that the aim of the school is to lead souls to Christ, and that this aim is sincerely entertained, we are inexcusable if we do not diligently strive to make disciples of the children and youth whom we are teaching. Judging from appearances, must we not conclude that many treat the result in view with indifference, if not contempt. That result is the ingathering of the youth under our care.

To secure the result our first aim must be to make distinct impressions, and one at a time. After this we must repeat the effort, not by sameness of phrase or speech, but by identity of truth and thought. The varied utterance of mind, and varied illustration, but ever come back to the few fundamental truths which are at once the foundation of the gospel, and the occasion of our teaching. The soul that is saved and God offers to save it. The soul lost all is lost.

You are making impressions which will be indelible. If you have both the knowledge and the experience of these great truths in your own soul, you will make them the exclusive subjects of your teaching, and if you feel them deeply you will aim to make the impressions distinct and abiding.

The great task is, to make a sharp cut impression, and then by repeating it, to render it indelible. We cannot reasonably hope by any way easier or shorter than this to secure results in teaching.

The desired result will be much promoted by singleness of aim. I do not mean that the one thing needful should be incessantly harped upon in a monotone; but it should set the key to all the music, and make itself clearly heard and seen and felt in every illustration.

Let skill and invention be on the alert with devout endeavor—let decorative art appear—but all auxiliary. Employ all useful and promising expedients, but never for the purpose of displaying them. The farmer takes his machinery into the field not to show off the bright paint and varnish, not to excite admiration at the fine movements, not even draw attention by the buzz and clatter, to the operations of the machine, but for the work it can do. When it takes hold half the noise ceases. When we get down to solid work we are too much in earnest to pay attitudes in the center, or subordinate things to superior purposes.

To secure results of teaching we should also retain the pupils until the end in view is accomplished. That end is conversion—not a mere avowal of discipleship, but a satisfactory evidence of a saving faith in Christ. Such faith implies other graces, which together impel their possessor to seek an alliance with the people of God. Thus the new born soul is led into the visible fold of the Good Shepherd.

The scholars should not leave us until they are brought to the door, nor will they leave us then, but we enter hand in hand together to abide within.

Just here we encounter some of our greatest obstacles. Notor ously a large proportion of scholars leave us without conversion. We have before said that our work is peculiarly limited to a certain period of life within which we can make distinct and abiding impressions. The period should be longer than it is. It is without reason or necessity abridged. The natural restlessness of youth, love of change, and impatience of restraint, which appear very early in our country, tend to break the links which keep the young immortal under our influence. And when the ties broken thereby on one hand a secret gratification at being released from irksome restraints, and on the other, a painful sense of failure embittered by the well founded apprehension that the youth is now exposed to temptation, which leads directly into the broad way of destruction. In a great many instances the fugitive from the Sunday school is not a forsaker of the sanctuary, for he has never been induced to frequent it.

It may often happen that the scholars upon whose minds the best impressions are made are not converted when they leave the school; but if they have meanwhile become regular attendants upon public worship their prospects are still hopeful, for as the Apostle Paul writes "it hath pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."

One of the most effective measures for checking the early abandonment of the school, will be found in maintaining classes of adults. The unconscious influence wrought by older persons upon the younger scholars will often do away with the too prevalent reason for leaving the school, viz., that it is designed for children, and the boy is getting too old or too wise to remain in it, when in fact he needs its influences more than ever before. If he leaves it now, he abandons it under false impressions, and the result so far as it appears at all, is a failure only. But inestimable benefits can be secured to the adults who attend these classes,—by the study of God's word in regularly prescribed portions,—the lesson being already known in advance can be made the theme of careful study and illustration, and every week pass by, the diligent student becomes better and better furnished with the knowledge of the truth. Besides this he is unconsciously influencing the young to follow his example. This influence is powerful and often decisive. It is stronger far than words. It seems to say to them, "We are exploring regions far beyond any that you have ever seen, we stood with you once on the boundaries, and had no idea of the richness and attractiveness of the territories which we have since entered, and our delight therein enlarges with every step, we are persuaded that that which lies before us is more inviting still than anything that we have passed over, for there remains the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

It is the steady hand grasping the sturdy; the strong arm thrown around the really weak.

Another indispensable means for retaining the scholars is an abundant provision for them in the house of God. This is made, I was about to say, invariably in the older portions of our country, and to the eye of a thoughtful person no sight is more charming at the hours of public worship than to see a large proportion of the congregation composed of children and youth. The auxiliary efforts of the devout and intelligent teacher are thus brought under the direct operation of the permanent means which the Almighty Lord and Saviour has appointed for the salvation of the soul, the growth in grace, its usefulness and training for glory.

The wise and watchful pastor seeing so many of the children and youth in his audience, will at least in part adapt the services to their taste and capacity without insult, or buffoonery, or puerility. They quickly respond to such well applied efforts on their behalf and reward them by a bright attention.

The officers of the school should therefore use the most strenuous efforts to secure the attendance of the scholars upon the ordinances of the church, and thereby create a disposition to join in its worship, and the home feeling of a child in the house of its father I am persuaded that the neglect of this imperative duty is the one comprehensive occasion of much of the loss and failure in Sunday school effort.

This accommodation of the school in the church is not therefore a transplanting from the one into the other; it is a culture and a growth of the young plants of grace in the one garden of the Lord—with only a more watchful care bestowed upon those plants which in consequence of their tender age are most exposed to injury.

All this is done in the same congregation, where all ages and conditions meet together—in the same family where parents and children are dwelling and God's promise is to both—in the same fold where the Chief Shepherd says to the under shepherds, first "feed my lambs," and after that, "feed my sheep."

In the scriptural view, then, the Sabbath school is not an organization outside of the church. Not even the mission school is independent, although it is doing an outside or aggressive work. It is a substitute of the Christian family, a forerunner of the pulpit and pastorate, yet always a nursery and auxiliary of the church of God. The mission school is the aim of Christian effort reaching forth into places where the church visible does not exist, but with a view to its appearing in due time. The mission school, like the Young Men's Christian Association, is a sowing of the seed beside all waters but where the seed begins to take root they should be fenced in.

To secure the final result of teaching, then, it is conclusive that the home school is not an auxiliary of the church, but of the young and budding life of the church itself.

It follows the example of our Lord, who constantly instructed his disciples and the multitude composed of old and young, converted and unconverted, by question and answer, by comment and exposition. It reminds us also of the apostle's method, who taught not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, and of his admonition, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you; teaching and admonishing one another in all wisdom; singing in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, with grace in your hearts to the Lord."

The school and the church then should never be divorced. Both began together, when Christianity began, and "what God hath joined together let not man put asunder." With change of form, but identity of aim, they still survive, and are more flourishing than ever. When the great reformation came, the church school was retained for both children and adults, by Luther, Calvin Cranmer, Knox and Zwingle who all maintained the school as a part of the church. In the times of widespread persecution which followed the reformation a great part of the scriptural instruction was conveyed by the hunted shepherds of the flocks, to the groups of families in the simple form of expounding the scripture followed by question and answer. They met as frequently as they could, or dared, in larger assemblies to gather in the fruit of the social and domestic instruction.

In later times a similar method of instruction, although somewhat changed in character, was adopted by the Wesleys whose famous class was made the pillar of Methodism, which has been set up in all parts of the world.

Hence it will appear, upon even slight examination of facts, that wherever this method is followed the best and highest results of sabbath school teaching are attained.

The reward of individual effort, however must not be overlooked. The faithful and devoted teacher can do much to prepare the scholars to be benefitted by the ordinances of the church. No preparation for profitable hearing is so promising as the study of holy scripture, as that is the best preaching which disposes the hearers to search the scriptures daily. And the Sabbath school is now doing this preparatory work better than ever before. Never has there been such thorough and abundant provision for it, and never before were there so many children and adults engaged in the study of God's word.

A prominent question of our time in Sabbath school conventions is, "How can we secure the habitual attendance of scholars on the preaching of the gospel?" There is no greater question involved in our work. Every Sabbath school, especially every teacher, can promote the happy answer in the most efficient manner. And when their attention is thoroughly awakened to it it will be done.

We have not exhausted the subject, but having filled the place allotted to us, will gather up the conclusions.

In order therefore to see progress we must make our instructions clear, pointed and indelible. We must prosecute our work diligently for the time is very short. We must forsake the old notion that the Sabbath school is for children only. We must by all means, inculcate the duty of attendance upon the ordinances of the church, and when this method is intelligently and prayerfully presented, we may confidently expect the highest results of Sabbath school teaching.

PORTLAND SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

The meetings held under the auspices of this society during the past week and on yesterday, have been very interesting and largely attended.

A series of meetings has been commenced for the especial benefit of the "men before the mast," or as lands people call them, "sailors." These meetings are similar in character to what are called "cottage meetings" on land.

The first of these was held on board the Simonth Leadles, a very large and well-found bark of over 1,200 tons burthen. A large part of her crew have become deeply interested in religious matters since the vessel's arrival in this port from Rio de Janeiro. Several have been converted to God, two of their number, Mr. Hart, the "boatswain," and Mr. Allen, one of the seamen, were baptized by Rev. Mr. Coates in the Baptist church last Thursday evening.

The next of these meetings are to be held tonight and next Friday night on this same vessel at 7 P. M., and on to-morrow evening on board the Caithch at the same hour. These meetings are not for the public, but are a kind of family gathering for the crews of vessels. The captains consent to let Chaplain Stubbs and his wife call their crews together for Christian instruction, in their respective ships.

The afternoon services yesterday were held in the cabin of the Brodick Bay. The captain and his excellent wife extended a cordial welcome to the numerous seamen who filled the cabin, and participated in the services.

Perhaps the most interesting Bethel meeting has been established by Mrs. Stubbs "for her sailor lads," at the chaplain's residence on Saturday evenings at 7 P. M. Here officers and men truly meet on the level and part on the square. At these meetings the secrets of a true spiritual masonry are explained and illustrated. Thus these young seafaring converts are stimulated to become "wise master builders," See 1 Cor. 3:10. COM.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

Saturday morning the two Chinese, Charley Lee and Ah Lee, under conviction for murder in the first degree, were arraigned in the State Circuit Court for sentence. They were brought into Court by the under-Sheriff, Ah Lee having a wild, vicious look and knitbrow, but Charley was smiling "as a basket of chips," and seemed only about as much impressed with the solemnity of the occasion as if the penalty about to be imposed on him, was of the most trivial character. They were ordered to stand up, and an interpreter called and sworn. Charley was first called upon to answer if he had anything to say why the sentence of the law should not be passed upon him and as he speaks English answered, "Judge you got the long wrong; me sure. Judge Bellinger then said.

"Charley Lee—It is ordered by the court that you be taken hence to the county jail of this county, and there be safely kept until Friday the seventh day of February A. D. 1879, and that between the hours of 10 A. M. and 2 P. M. on that day, you be taken to the place provided for execution, and that you then and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead; and may God have mercy on your soul."

The prisoner replied with a smile.—"Judge, I am very much obliged to you."

Ah Lee was then told, through the interpreter, that the court

HENCE THESE PLAINTS

With all that portion of the Democratic press which places partisanship before the public interests there is a concerted effort to create an impression that the report of the committee of investigation is unfair to the late officials of the state. It may be that not quite all the Democratic journals of the state will try to apologize for the frauds which have been exposed, but as yet we have seen no one of them which has uttered a word in condemnation of the frauds or their perpetrators. All those which have as yet commented on the report censure the committee instead of the unfaithful and derelict officials. They are of opinion that the Grover-Chadwick administration really did nothing wrong, or at most that its faults were very trifling, that the investigation has been conducted more for the purpose of "breaking down certain persons" than with the object of getting at the truth; that the committee allowed "personal feeling and prejudices" to creep in and tinge their report with a color of revenge and spite; that the object has been more to "gratify personal hatred" than to benefit the people, and so on. It may be remembered that this was precisely the vein of comment pursued by the Tweed organs when the great rascalities perpetrated by his ring were first exposed. Yet it was not long till these apologies for fraud were drowned in the general voice of indignation, and astute Democratic leaders saw that their only hope was to denounce the frauds and join in the general demand for the punishment of the criminals. Now here in Oregon is a case which in all its parts shows as much dishonesty as that of the Tweed ring; and in proportion to the wealth of our state, the amount of the frauds and robberies is far more than that perpetrated by the Tweed gang, the enormity and infamy of whose operations resounded throughout the whole country. If the Democratic organs and politicians shall now pledge their party to the defense of the great frauds of the last eight years in this state, as many of them seem to be preparing to do, in the very next election their party will be annihilated. Its only hope is in repudiating utterly the Grover Chadwick gang and all their works, and calling to the leadership another class of men. Suppose this report were a revelation of the frauds of Republican administration, how would these organs which are now excusing Democratic delinquents ring with denunciations of Republican rascality, going even so far as to assert that the disclosures furnished further proof that the Republican party was inherently corrupt, had no honesty within it, and could nowhere be trusted. But they allow themselves to see no fault whatever in their own party, and they who can find nothing to censure in Grover's transactions in the school fund, in Chadwick's operations in swamp lands, in Brown's method of getting forty dollars out of the state for every ream of printing paper used, and in the miscellaneous transactions in which Cann, Gilfry, Hackleman, Brooks, Barker, Miller and others participated, are invincible to proof when their fellow partisans are arraigned as culprits.

But there are many Democrats with whom [illegible] common sense, and they know that it has no tinge of personal malice in it. Who are the authors of the report? There is but one Republican among them, and this fact is a sufficient answer to the charge that the committee was moved by partisan considerations in reporting the delinquencies of Democratic officials. The legislature which appointed this committee is Democratic in both branches. A majority of the committee are Democrats of unexceptionable standing in their party. Mr. Galloway of Yamhill is a man in whose integrity his people have so much confidence that he has been twice elected to the legislature from a Republican county. Mr. Thompson, of Wasco, is a man of highest standing for intelligence and honor, and a Democrat whose record even in a party sense has never been impeached. Mr. White, of Umatilla, though formerly a Republican, has acted consistently with the Democratic party for many years past, and was elected to the legislature by the highest majority given to any candidate in the strongest Democratic county of the state. Mr. Ross, of Jackson, though now acting as an Independent, has a Democratic record of many years' standing, and never was a Republican. The only Republican on the committee is Mr. Thompson, of Multnomah; and he has never been an extreme partisan. The members of the committee are men whose lives disprove the assertion that they have been or could be actuated by "personal spite" in any matter, and least of all in a matter of responsible official duty. The attempt to parry in this way will not do. The committee found official misconduct, and reported upon it; and their language, though always plain and direct as it should be, is always temperate and discriminating. It faithfully reports the facts which the committee found. The language is used to express, not to conceal their meaning.

The organs allege injustice, but in no instance do they point it out. What would they have had of the committee? Should it have whitewashed Grover and reported that his "loans" of the school fund directly to himself or in a circuitous way through others so that the money came back to his pocket—transactions through which the fund has lost vast sums which it will never recover,—were quite proper? Ought they to have found that the Chadwick Cann-Walker business was worthily done? That the unusual and enormous allowances to sheriffs were quite right? That the payments to Gilfry, Miller, Barker and a multitude more, payments which were not only scandalously extravagant in themselves but were wholly without authority of law, were proofs of official fidelity? That the forty thousand dollars out of which the state was swindled in connection with the Modoc war, including the large amount of property which never has been accounted for and overpay of officers for services never rendered, ought to be overlooked? These are but a few instances. Like questions might be asked in relation to all the delinquencies which the report has brought to light. The committee found that robberies had been committed in every direction, and what was it to say? We are told that it has shown "prejudice" and exhibited "spite" in speaking of these things, and yet it has spoken of them only in the terms of the dictionary and the statute. What the partisan organs would have is the same non-committal circumlocution in the report which may be seen in the testimony of Chadwick and others before the committee, in other words, a report designedly drawn to mean nothing, and to cover every illegal and wrongful transaction. They have not been accommodated with these plaints. Had the committee done

It is really a reproach to the state that it has not long ago constructed a good road along the Columbia river, to furnish means of communication between the eastern and western divisions of the country at times like the present when navigation is closed. Without such road both sections are effectually bottled up. Years ago this was of less importance to Western Oregon, but the growth of the eastern division has been so rapid and its development has become so great that we can no longer afford to be cut off from it. Besides, it is due to the people there that such connection be established. A road has been finished from the Dalles to the lower Cascades, and there is a good road from Portland to a point some distance beyond the crossing of Sandy. But for the space of seventeen miles there is no road. Part of the way the route is a somewhat rugged one, but the road would not be expensive, and considering its importance and value the state ought to finish it. In fact it ought to have done so a good while ago, and it is hoped that another legislative session will not be suffered to pass without the necessary action. If a few thousand dollars of the money which has been grabbed unlawfully by officials had been spared for this needed service the two divisions of our state would not become strangers to each other every winter when a freeze occurs.

Small chance now, says the Standard, that we shall get the general government to assume payment of our Modoc war claims. The intimation is that the legislative committee should not have exposed the frauds. But such portion of these claims as are fraudulent the government ought not to pay; and if they are fastened on the state it is the penalty it must suffer for having officials who did not protect its honor and its interests.

Not the slightest disturbance has been produced in financial circles anywhere by resumption of specie payments. Government redeems all its notes as fast as offered, but is not finally withdrawing any portion of them."

LITERARY NOTES.

The Atlantic for January has a strong but anonymous article on "Workingmen's Woes." Its most important article, on the whole, is, however, Goldwin Smith's inquiry, 'Is Universal Suffrage a Failure?" a summary of which has been printed by THE OREGONIAN.

Houghton, Osgood & Co. send us a life-size portrait of James Russell Lowell, uniform with their portraits of Longfellow, Bryant and Whittier. The execution of this engraving is excellent, and the likeness good, except that it does not quite do justice to Mr. Lowell's age. These portraits are furnished only to subscribers of the Atlantic Monthly at about cost price—$1 each.

A new novel by "Patrobas" (D. Lothrop) will be something of an event. "Ranger City" records sand cities in the west which promised to become Chicagos and did not. It is refreshing to get at Nasby's humor without the orthography. The author has had the assistance in many of the chapters of this book of Shirley Dare, the well known writer for the magazines.

London Athenæum: The narrative of the new "Wanderings of Ulysses," to which citizens of the United States look forward, will be less comprehensive than was expected, as Gen. Grant has given up his plan of traveling round the world and returning home by way of San Francisco. Mr. Russell Young, who has generally accompanied him, will be intrusted with the arrangement of any particulars which Gen. Grant may desire to publish, and Mr. Young's own contributions to the New York Herald will supply material for a volume.

A correspondent writes: "Why did it require sixteen years to complete Mrs. Clarke's 'Concordance to Shakespeare?' Was it the manual labor involved? There is no 'head work' required, it seems to me. What is the use of such a book when completed?" Mrs. Clarke did not devote sixteen years of close, continuous labor to her Concordance. She was sixteen years in compiling it because it is an immense work, requiring not only great industry, but good judgment and taste. Its use is, first, to index Shakespeare, so that any part of his writings can be instantly referred to; secondly, to afford materials for a comparison of his plays; and thirdly, to assist in an analysis of his vocabulary.

Dr. Weisse in his book, heretofore noticed, says the chief obstacle to the diffusion of the English language is arbitrary orthography. This is chiefly due to the confusion caused in Anglo-Saxon by the introduction of provincialisms. Nearly all the words not spelled as they are pronounced are of Anglo-Saxon origin, and it is a remarkable fact that in the early Saxon the spelling and pronunciation of these words are harmonious. Dr. Weisse, in this connection, gives a table of fifty Anglo Saxon words, represented by 179 letters, each averaging three letters, all of which are pronounced; whereas the fifty corresponding English words are represented by 23 letters, each averaging four letters, of which at least one is unpronounced. Thus the mother dialect is more phonetic and concise than the daughter. "As these superfluous letters crept into English through provincialisms," says the author, "to drop them and return to plain Anglo Saxon under Alfred the Great would phonetize about one quarter of the English language and render it more laconic, two decided advantages which ought to enlist Anglo Saxonists in this movement, especially when they consider that the English vocabulary numbers about three-quarters of Greco-Latin words, which need less phonetizing than the Anglo Saxon quarter."

Senator Bayard

"A Delawarian" sends us the following

I observe that in reply to a question from a correspondent, as to the pronunciation of Senator Bayard's name, you say that the second a is silent. That is a mistake which I may venture to correct, as I have been familiar with the name all my life. It is always pronounced Bi ard (t, as in pine, and two syllables, with the accent on the first,) by those who are so fortunate as to bear it.

The error noted was the result of inadvertence on the part either of editor or compositor. The statement was that "in the second name (Bayard's) the second "a" is silent." The intention was to say that "the first a is silent." It is probable that the error arose from inattention through repetition of the word "second." The purpose was to say that the name is pronounced as if written "Byard"—giving 'y' the sound of long i, as in the explanation above.

Matrimony as a Paying Institution.

[Columbus (O.) Statesman.]

"Every man should provide liberally for his family, says Mr. Smith. "Ever since my marriage I have kept my wife provided with a sewing machine, surmounted by a fine mirror." "What is the mirror for?" inquired a party present. "Well," said the orator, "I tell her that when she gets so lazy that she can't run the machine she can sit still and see herself starve to death."

About the Only Drawback.

[Norristown Herald.]

If Edison's electric light should take the place of kerosene in our kitchens, there must be some other plan adopted to prevent the increase of ignorant servants.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

The colored people of Georgia own about $5,000,000 worth of property as shown by tax records, chiefly in lands.

Gold and greenbacks have been long separated, but at last like Mercy and Peace, they have come together and "kissed each other."

"Non intervention!" said Talleyrand to Lord Alvanley, "non-intervention is a metaphysical and political word which means pretty much the same thing as 'intervention!'"

Edwin Booth has written a letter upon the drama, in which he expresses the wish that the managements of theaters could be denied to speculators, and placed in the hands of actors who value their reputations and respect their calling.

Bismarck doesn't like cabinets. He says it is most presume to discuss every plan with five or six persons who know little or nothing upon the subject. In Bismarck's opinion, one man is enough in a government, especially if he is the one man.

The contractors for building the first 100 miles of the Northern Pacific west of the Missouri are Walker & Clark. Walker is a resident of Peekskill, N. Y., and Clark lives in Montana. The company will pay the contractors monthly in cash, reserving fifteen per cent. till the completion of the contract.

The next president of the United States will be made so by the spontaneous choice of the people, on the issues dominant in 1880, and will not be made by any efforts, schemes or "combinations" of his own. And personal character and popularity will be more important elements than at any period since Jackson's time.

A Christian Inference.

New Orleans Picayune Paris Letter.]

M. Alex. Dumas was returning home late o'other night when an old woman, half concealed by the deep recess, suddenly rose from the seat where she was crouching and craved alms. Dumas crossed her palm with silver. The friend with whom he was walking, asked: "Do you give to such people? Aren't you often deceived?" There are so many imposters in Paris?" Dumas answered. "My dear fellow, when an old woman begs one may give without fear of being imposed on, for there is prima facie evidence that she has the misfortune to have no son."

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Directors, held on the 4th day of January, 1879, an assessment (No 2) of six (6) cents per share was levied on the capital stock of the corporation, payable on or before the first day of February, 1879, to the secretary, at the office of the company, in Portland, Oregon. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on Monday the 3d day of February, 1879, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and unless payment is made before will be sold on Tuesday, the 5th day of March, 1879, to pay the delinquent assessment, together with cost of advertising and expenses of sale. I firmly believe Fellows' Hypophosphites has done more good than any medicine yet discovered in the cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough and kindred diseases.
W. H. THOMPSON,
Telegraph station,
Harbour Grace Newfoundland.

Persons suffering from impure blood, or whose health is giving away, either as ministers or those who study closely will find Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites the material to build them up, and the tonic to keep them there.
Pogwasa, N. H. DR. CLAY.

Each effort of the mind, every act of the body, will extract a volume of nervous element in proportion to the magnitude of the thought or action, and since Fellows' Hypophosphites really will supply the nutrient to the body, it must support the human mechanism successfully, after the vigor of youth is passed.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATER.—At matinee Saturday afternoon "The Duke's Motto" was repeated for the last time to a large audience. In the evening Mr Piercy appeared in one of his strongest impersonations—Bob Brierly" in the "Ticket-of-Leave Man." The attendance was very fair, and the play very satisfactorily presented. Mr Piercy appeared very advantageously, and the character of the ex convict must be accorded a place among that gentleman's strongest and most effective portrayals. The support was very excellent. Miss Walters made a very acceptable "May Edwards;" Miss Woodthorpe, as "Sam Willoughby," was very clever; J. M. Ward, as "Meller Moss," was uniquely excellent, both as to acting and make up; Mr. Lindsay, as "Hawkshaw," the detective, was capital; Walter Leman made an excellent "Mr. Gibson;" Miss Wade, as "Mrs. Willoughby," gave a very laughable personation of that loquacious but generous-hearted woman; Mr. Wade, as "Jim Dalton," was quite effective.

"TWO ORPHANS."—This evening Sardou's beautiful play of "Two Orphans" will be produced at New Market theater in magnificent style. Mr. Sam Piercy will personate the dual roles of "Pierre," the cripple, and "Chevalier de Vawdrey." These characters have been played by Mr Piercy for over 300 nights in the eastern cities. Miss Walters will personate the character of "Madame Frouchard" and be supported by the full company. Porter has painted some new and magnificent scenery in addition to the play. No effort has been spared to place this beautiful piece on the stage in first-class style. Every lover of the drama should not fail to witness the "Two Orphans." Reserve your seats in time.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The School Not for Children Only—How to Secure the Results of Teaching.

BY REV. A. L. LINDSLEY, D. D.

This subject is second to none which has been presented here, for surely all our preparations and efforts, yea, even our prayers, may go for nothing unless we gather in the harvest.

We have a definite aim. No Christian enterprise is so unique, none so complete as Sabbath school instruction. It takes up a limited part of the career of an immortal spirit, and gives it direction towards a happy eternity.

It begins with childhood and ends, alas! too often, but nevertheless for the most part, with youth. It should not stop here for no good reason can be assigned for excluding persons of any age from class study of God's word as conducted in church schools. Since, however, the great majority of pupils belong to early life, the domain of our efforts is well defined and we can therefore with great clearness survey its boundaries at a single glance. No one can leave them without our notice, and yet how many, in some cases embracing a great majority, do escape go away into the world, and so far as the Sabbath school work is concerned, they are actually lost.

This is a dreadful result. How can we prevent it?

On the presumption that the aim of the school is to lead souls to Christ, and that this aim is sincerely entertained, we are inexcusable if we do not diligently strive to make disciples of the children and youth upon whom we are teaching. Judging from appearances, however, we must conclude that many treat the result in view with indifference, if not contempt. That result is the ingathering of the youth under our care.

To secure the result our first aim must be to make distinct impressions and one at a time. After this we must repeat the effort, not by sameness of phrase or speech, but by identity of truth and thought. Use varied utterance indeed, and varied illustration but ever come back to the few fundamental truths which are at once the foundation of the gospel and the occasion of our teaching. The soul is lost, and God offers to save it. The soul lost all is lost.

You are making impressions which will be indelible. If you have both the knowledge and the experience of these great truths in your own soul, you will make them the exclusive subjects of your teaching, and if you feel them deeply you will aim to make the impressions distinct and abiding.

The great task is, to make a sharp cut impression, and then by repeating it, to render it indelible. We cannot reasonably hope by any way easier or shorter than this to secure results of teaching.

The desired results will be much promoted by singleness of aim. I do not mean that the one thing needful should be incessantly harped upon in a monotone, but it should set the key to all the music, and make itself clearly heard and seen and felt in every illustration.

Let skill and invention be on the alert with devout endeavor—let decorative art appear—but all auxiliary. Employ all useful and promising expedients, but never for the purpose of displaying them. The former is like machinery into the field not to show off the bright paint and varnish, not to excite admiration at the swift movements, but even drew attention by the buzz and clatter to the operations of the machine, but for the work it can do. When it takes hold half the noise ceases. When we get down to solid work we are too much in earnest to put auxiliaries into the center, or subordinate things in superior places.

To secure results of teaching we should also retain the pupils until the end in view is accomplished. That end is conversion—not a mere avowal of discipleship, but a satisfactory evidence of a saving faith in Christ. Such faith implies other graces, which together impel their possessor to seek an alliance with the people of God. Thus the new born soul is led into the visible fold of the Good Shepherd.

The scholars should not leave us until they are brought to the door, nor will they leave us then, but will enter hand in hand together to abide within.

Just here we encounter some of our greatest obstacles. Notoriously a large proportion of scholars leave us without conversion. We have before said that our work is peculiarly limited to a certain period of life within which we can make distinct and abiding impressions. The period should be longer than it is. It is without reason or necessity abridged. The natural restlessness of youth, love of change, and impatience of restraint, which appear very early in our country, tend to break the links which keep the young immortal under our influence. And when the life is bent on these ends no hand a secret gratification at being released from irksome restraints, and on the other, a painful sense of failure embittered by the well founded supposition that the youth is now exposed to temptation, which leads directly into the broad way of destruction. In a great many instances the fugitive from the Sunday school is not a forsaker of the sanctuary, for he has never been in the habit of frequenting it.

It may often happen that the scholars upon whose minds the best impressions are made are not converted when they leave the school; but if they have meanwhile become regular attendants upon public worship their prospects are still hopeful, for as the Apostle Paul writes: "It hath pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."

One of the most effective measures for checking the early abandonment of the school, will be found in maintaining Classes of adults. The unconscious influence brought by older persons upon the younger scholars will go far to sweep away with the too prevalent reason for leaving the school, viz., that it is designed for children, and the boy feels that too old or too wise to remain in it, when in fact he needs its influences more than ever before. If he leaves it now, he abandons it under false impressions, and the result so far as it appears at all, is a failure only. But inestimable benefits can be secured to the adults who attend these classes, and by the study of God's word in regularly prescribed lessons the lesson being already known in advance can be made the theme of careful study and thus as the weeks and years roll by, the diligent student becomes imbued with the knowledge of the truth. Besides this he is unconsciously influencing the young to follow his example. This influence is powerful and often decisive. It is stronger far than words. It seems to say to them: "We are exploring regions far beyond any that you have ever seen; we stood with you once on the boundaries, and had no idea of the richness and attractiveness of the territories which we have since entered, and our delight therein enlarges with every step. We are persuaded that that which lies before us is more inviting still than anything that we have passed over, for there remains the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

It is the steady hand grasping the giddy; the strong arm thrown around the really weak.

Another indispensable means for retaining the scholars is an abundant provision for them in the house of God. This is made, I was about to say, invariably, in the older portions of our country, and to the eye of a thoughtful person no sight is more charming at the hours of public worship than to see a large proportion of the congregation composed of children and youth. The auxiliary efforts of the devout and intelligent teacher are thus brought under the direct operation of the permanent means which the All wise God and Saviour has appointed for the salvation of the soul, its growth in grace, its usefulness and training for glory.

The wise and watchful pastor seeing so many of the children and youth in his audience, will at least in part adapt the services to their taste and capacity without tinsel, or buffoonery, or puerility. They quickly respond to such well applied efforts on their behalf and reward them by a bright attention.

The officers of the school should therefore use the most strenuous efforts to secure the attendance of the scholars upon the ordinances of the church, and thereby create a disposition to join in its worship, and the home feeling of a child in the house of its father. I am persuaded that the neglect of this imperative duty is the one comprehensive occasion of much of the loss and failure in Sunday school effort.

This accommodation of the school in the church is not therefore a transplanting from the one into the other; it is a culture and a growth of the young plants of grace in the one garden of the Lord with only a more watchful care bestowed upon those plants which in consequence of their tender age are most exposed to injury.

All this is done in the same congregation, where all ages and conditions meet together—in the same family where parents and children are dwelling, and God's promise is to both—in the same fold where the Chief Shepherd says to the under shepherds, first: "Feed my lambs," and after that, "Feed my sheep."

In the scriptural view, then, the Sabbath school is not an organization outside of the church. Not even the mission school is independent, although it is doing an outside or aggressive work. It is a substitute of the Christian family, a forerunner of the pulpit and pastorate, yet always a nursery and auxiliary of the church of God. The mission school is the arm of Christian effort reaching forth into places where the church visible does not exist, but with a view to its appearing in due time. The mission school, like the Young Men's Christian Association, is a sowing of the seed beside all waters, but where the seed begins to take root they should be fenced in.

To secure the final result of teaching, then, it is conclusive that the home school is not an auxiliary of the church but of the young and budding life of the church itself.

It follows the example of our Lord, who constantly instructed his disciples and the multitude composed of old and young, converted and unconverted, by question and answer, by comment and exposition. It reminds us also of the apostle's method, who taught no in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, and of his admonition, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you; teaching and admonishing one another in all wisdom; singing in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, with grace in your hearts to the Lord."

The school and the church then should never be divorced. Both began together, when Christianity began, and "what God hath joined together let not man put asunder." With change of form, but identity of aim, they still survive, and are more flourishing than ever. When the great reformation came, the church school was revived, for both children and adults, by Luther, Calvin Ursinus Knox and Zwingle who all maintained the school as a part of the church. In the times of widespread persecution which followed the reformation a great part of the scriptural instruction was conveyed by the hunted shepherds of the flocks, to the groups of families in the simple form of expounding the scripture, followed by question and answer. They met as frequently as they could, or dared, in larger assemblies to gather in the fruit of the social and domestic instruction.

In later times a similar method of instruction, although somewhat changed in character, was adopted by the Wesleys whose famous class was made the pillar of Methodism, which has been set up in all parts of the world.

Hence it will appear, upon even slight examination of facts, that wherever this method is followed the best and highest results of sabbath school teaching are attained.

The reward of individual effort, however, must not be overlooked. The faithful and devoted teacher can do much to prepare the scholars to be benefitted by the ordinances of the church. No preparation for profitable hearing is so promising as the study of holy scripture, as that is the best preaching which disposes the hearers to search the scriptures daily. And the Sabbath school is now doing this preparatory work better than ever before. Never has there been such thorough and abundant provision for it, and never before were there so many children and adults engaged in the study of God's word.

A prominent question of our time in Sabbath school conventions is, "How can we secure the habitual attendance of scholars on the preaching of the gospel?" There is no greater question involved in our work. Every Sabbath school, especially every teacher, can promote the happy answer in the most efficient manner. And when their attention is thoroughly awakened to it it will be done.

We have not exhausted the subject, but having filled the space allotted to us, will gather up the conclusions.

In order therefore to secure results, we must make our instructions clear, pointed and indelible. We must prosecute our work diligently for the time is very short. We must forsake the old notion that the Sabbath school is for children only. We must, by all means, inculcate the duty of attendance upon the ordinances of the church, and when this method is intelligently and prayerfully practiced, we may confidently expect the highest results of Sabbath school teaching.

PORTLAND SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

The meetings held under the auspices of this society during the past week and on yesterday, have been very interesting and largely attended.

A series of meetings has been commenced for the especial benefit of the "men before the mast" or as lands people call them, "sailors." These meetings are similar in character to what are called "cottage meetings" on land.

The first of these was held on board the Hannah Landles, a very large and well-found bark of over 1,500 tons burthen. A large part of her crew have become deeply interested in religious matters since the vessel's arrival in this port from Rio de Janeiro. Several have been converted to God, two of their number Mr. Hart, the "boatswain," and Mr Allen, one of the seamen, were baptized by Rev Mr. Coates in the Baptist church last Thursday evening.

The next of these meetings are to be held tonight and next Friday night on this same vessel at 7 P. M., and on to-morrow evening on board the Caulloch at the same hour. These meetings are not for the public, but are a kind of family gathering for the crews of vessels. The captains consent to let Chaplain Stubbs and his wife call their crews together for Christian instruction, in their respective ships.

The afternoon services yesterday were held in the cabin of the Bonded Bay. The captain and his excellent wife extended a cordial welcome to the numerous seamen who filled the cabin, and participated in the services.

Perhaps the most interesting Bethel meeting has been established by Mrs. Stubbs "for her sailor lads," at the chaplain's residence on Saturday evenings at 7 P. M. Here officers and men truly meet on the level and part on the square. At these meetings the secrets of the spiritual masonry are explained and illustrated. Thus these young seafaring converts are stimulated to become "wise master builders." SEE 1 Cor 3 10. COM.

RELEASE.

Wm Shackleford to First Congregational Society of Portland, Dec. 19, 1877, $2,000, lots 3 and 4, block 70, city.

Y. M. C. A.—The meetings of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon were of more than usual interest, both in the open air and in the room. We are glad that strangers coming to our city find so ready an opportunity to attend religious services. We are glad also to note the manifest improvement in the care of these rooms, and understand that there is to be some radical changes in the direction of making the association rooms still more attractive in the way of reading matter and comfort. Meeting to-night at 7.30, led by Rev. Mr. Coats, and the meetings during the week as usual. The worlds week of prayer will be observed in all the churches from 7.30 to 8.30 P. M., adjourning to the Y. M. C. A. rooms. COM.

Wife—"Well, John, what are you going to get for my holiday present?" Husband—"I've been thinking I would buy you one of those Superb Sewing Machines from John B. Garrison, at 149 Front street. You know the New Wilson has taken the first premium for two years in succession at our State Fair, and it must be the best." Wife—"Oh, dear, that's just what I've been wanting, I'm so glad!"

THE DEATH PENALTY.

Saturday morning the two Chinese, Charley Lee and Ah Lee, under conviction for murder in the first degree, were arraigned in the State Circuit Court for sentence. They were brought into Court by the under-Sheriff, Ah Lee having a wild, vicious look and knitbrow, but Charley was smiling "as a basket of chips," and seemed only about as much impressed with the solemnity of the occasion as if the penalty about to be imposed on him was of the most trivial character. They were ordered to stand up, and an interpreter called and sworn. Charley was first called upon to answer if he had anything to say why the sentence of the law should not be passed upon him and as he speaks English answered, "Judge you got the long (wrong) man sure. Judge Bellinger then said.

"Charley Lee—It is ordered by the court that you be taken hence to the county jail of this county, and there be safely kept until Friday the seventh day of February, A. D. 1879, and that between the hours of 10 A. M and 2 P. M. on that day, you be taken to the place provided for execution, and that you then and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

The prisoner replied with a smile:—"Judge, I am very much obliged to you."

Ah Lee was then told through the interpreter, that the court was about to pass sentence on him, and asked if he had anything to say why the sentence of the law should not be pronounced against him. He made some incoherent reply and the court pronounced the same sentence as in the case of his fellow-prisoner, and the condemned were at once led back to their cells.

FIRE MATTERS.

Big fire last week.

Company candidate's are now in order.

Tom Neally is going to organize an exempt association.

No. 3's boys manufactured a big sleigh, and enjoyed a merry ride yesterday.

The new department offices are now installed in their positions.

Engineer Goobold of No. 4 has everything about his house in apple-pie order.

The members of No. 1 feel grateful to one of their oldest exempt members for a munificent New Year's gift.

There were during the past year 40 fire alarms, and 29 alarms at which no service was rendered. The total loss was $55,425.

No. 3's heater was out of order last week, owing to the bursting of the feed pipe leading from the water main.

Chief Engineer Morgan will make his 2nd semi-annual report for the year 1878, at the next meeting of the Common Council.

No. 1's boys started in with the new year to make a cleaning up and are disposed to weed out all disreputable members who may be among them.

No. 5's new engine attended her baptismal fire last Tuesday evening in fine style, had she had sufficient hose would have made the older engines "scratch" to get first water.

The members of the department speak in terms of praise of the generosity of Mrs. C. H. Lewis, in furnishing them with hot-coffee and sandwiches last Tuesday evening. Thanks noble friend.
